Shadowfall

He stares into the darkness, watches his own reflection lift the cigar to his lips. Inhale, tilt head, exhale.

The music should be positive, be happy. But he looks at the creases by his eyes, the thinning hair, the slight downturn at the corners of his mouth and he reflects that it's easy to be positive, when you're young.

Inhale, tilt, exhale.

He meant every word. But there's so much darkness all around, and it's so hard to focus on the light.

Andi stubs out his cigar, folds his arms, and stares out at the night.

The darkness stares back.
